Olive Osmond is 'a little bit high-tech'

While other members of her family may be "a little bit country" or "a little bit rock 'n' roll," Olive Osmond — mother of the famous Osmond singing family — has gone "a little bit high-tech."

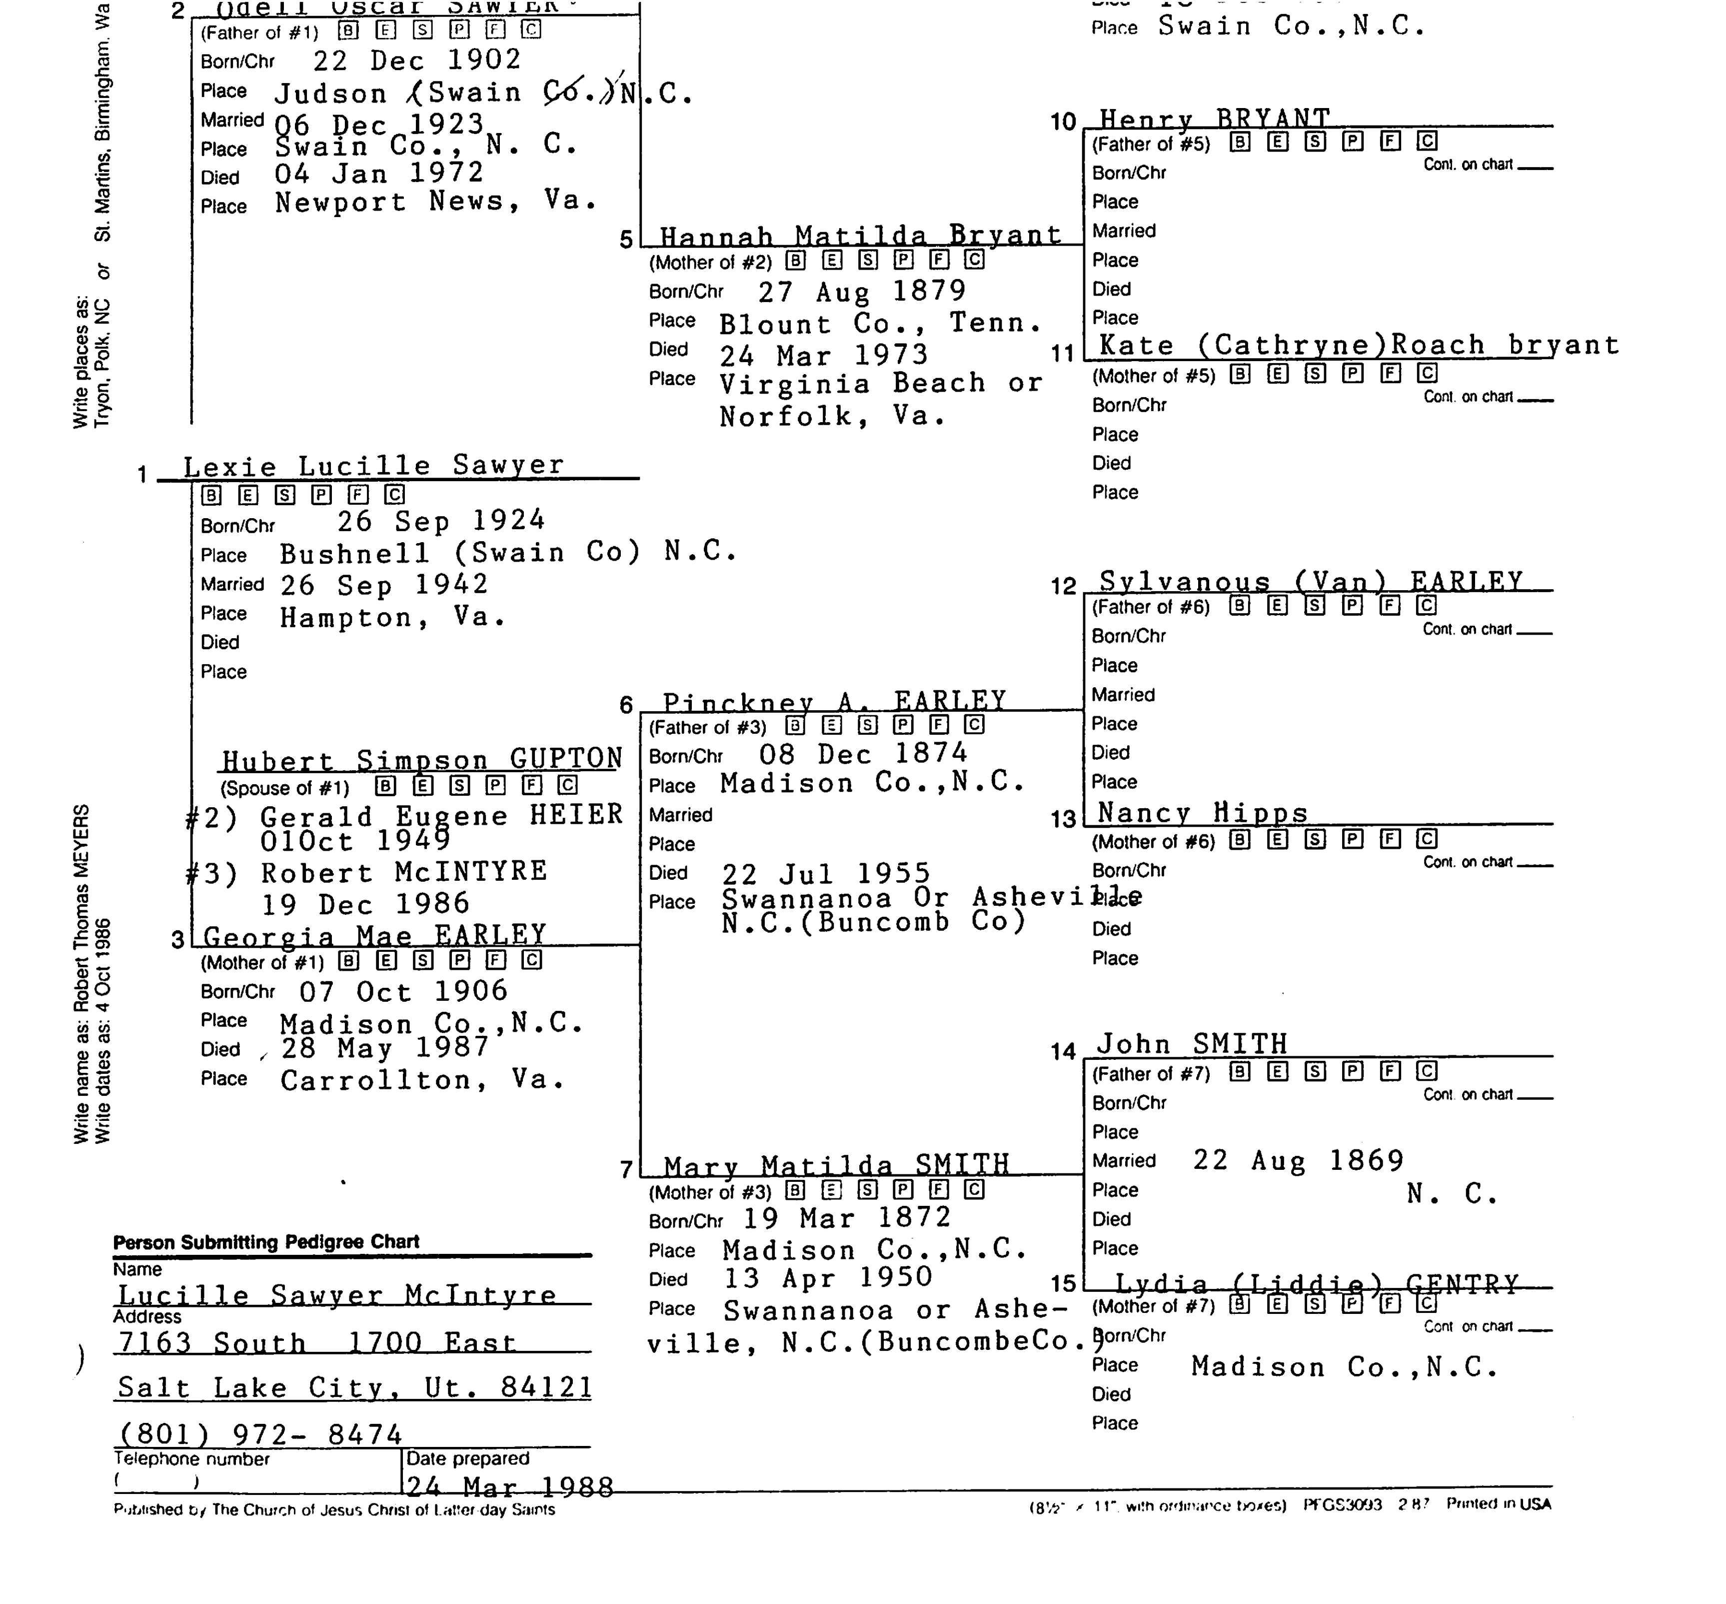

A small cubicle office in the Osmond Studios in Orem has been transformed into the Utah base for BreakThrough, an IBM-based computer software program marketed by Profit Technology Inc., which produces software aimed at increasing individual productivity and effectiveness in the corporate, government and educational fields. Olive Osmond is the sole dealer for the product in the state.

Osmond was introduced to this fast-growing company by the family's stockbroker. "Our stockbroker called us from New York and told us about a company that was going to take off the ground — a computer company," she told Genelle Larsen, Deseret News Utah County Bureau.

The result of more than seven years of research by a team headed by Dr. Orest J. Bedrij, BreakThrough offers eight distinctively different work environments, each designed to enhance the user's learning and memory abilities, as well as stimulate creativity in coming up with solutions, she said.

"We are excited about this new product and the possibilities it holds," Osmond said. "Right now I am working on putting the LDS missionary discussions in the system."

With many years of family success behind her and a flock of grandchildren to enjoy, Osmond insists the word "retirement" is not in her vocabulary. With this new business, Osmond hopes to be busy for many years to come.
